"IP protection can be difficult to navigate. I work with clients on building strategies to maximize their IP protection."

Joanna is a well-rounded attorney, who practices in many facets of intellectual property matters and IP litigation. She represents a wide array of clients, both nationally and internationally, on IP issues such as trademark development, protection, licensing and enforcement, trade dress, copyright, and trade secret protection, brand consistency, rights of publicity, and entertainment-related agreements. Joanna has extensive experience in international trademark protection and has resolved countless resolutions of trademark, domain name, copyright, and rights of publicity disputes. She also regularly advises clients on defamation claims and best practices in Internet and technology-related matters, such as domain name disputes, software and copyright licenses, and data privacy compliance.

Prior to starting her legal career, Joanna managed family and small businesses. With her complex understanding of the law and experience with business management, Joanna offers her clients expert, strategic advice when approaching all IP matters.

Outside the office, Joanna is an adjunct professor at the William S. Boyd School of law, where she teaches advanced level trademark courses.
